

In the interest of democracy and freedom, do not change the rules allowing fewer and fewer owners to decide what ideas are good for me. There has been less and less open discussion on the public airways, despite what Chairman Powell himself thinks. What he thinks is false, what he thinks is wrong. Do not change the rules. We want more diversity, not less. The recent war-mongering over the television is a prime example of the death of diversity and what happens when ideas are all decided by only a few, self-interested men. Lies and deceptions then become public policy. No voices are allowed to dissent. Do not change the rules.

R. Bayers